THE LATE SATANIC SPEECH OF DANIEL WEBSTER.

Though we have already published the whole of this speech in the Liberator, as revised by Mr. Webster, we make the following extracts from it, containing some of its most revolting features...

No injunction in the Gospel against Slavery! At the introduction of Christianity into the world, the Roman world was full of slaves, and I suppose...

The South humane and conscientious! The South have been accustomed to this relation between the two races all their lives, from their birth;

Right and Wrong not absolute! In all such disputes, there will sometimes men be found with whom every thing is absolute—absolutely wrong or absolutely right.

Colton made the scope good! I impute to the South no particularly selfish view in the change which has come over her. I impute to her certainly no dishonest view.

Four additional slave States! I say again, that so far as Texas is concerned—the whole of Texas south of 36 deg. 30m., which I suppose embraces the slave territory—there is no land...

Will vote against the Wilcox Proviso! I say further, that if a resolution, or a law, were now before us to provide a territorial government for New Mexico, I would not vote to put any prohibition into it.

The agreement with hell to be strictly fulfilled! We have slavery already among us. The Constitution found it among us; it recognized it, and gave it solemn guarantee.

No mercy to be shown to fugitive slaves!—Whereas the North is censurable! One complaint of the South has, in my opinion, found a more ready audience...

men, in the North, of all men who are not carried away by any fanciful ideas, or by any false idea whatever, to their constitutional obligations.

No injunction in the Gospel against Slavery! At the introduction of Christianity into the world, the Roman world was full of slaves, and I suppose there is to be found no injunction against that relation...

The South humane and conscientious! The South have been accustomed to this relation between the two races all their lives, from their birth; and they have been taught in general to treat the subjects of it with care and kindness...

Right and Wrong not absolute! In all such disputes, there will sometimes men be found with whom every thing is absolute—absolutely wrong or absolutely right. They see the right clearly; they think others ought to see it, and they are disposed to establish a broad line of distinction...

Colton made the scope good! I impute to the South no particularly selfish view in the change which has come over her. I impute to her certainly no dishonest view. All that has happened has been natural.

Four additional slave States! I say again, that so far as Texas is concerned—the whole of Texas south of 36 deg. 30m., which I suppose embraces the slave territory—there is no land not an acre, the north of which is not established by law, a law which cannot be repealed without the violation of a contract...

Will vote against the Wilcox Proviso! I say further, that if a resolution, or a law, were now before us to provide a territorial government for New Mexico, I would not vote to put any prohibition into it. The use of such a prohibition would be to the detriment of the Territory...

The agreement with hell to be strictly fulfilled! We have slavery already among us. The Constitution found it among us; it recognized it, and gave it solemn guarantee. To the full extent of the guarantees we are all bound in honor, in justice, and by the Constitution.

No mercy to be shown to fugitive slaves!—Whereas the North is censurable! One complaint of the South has, in my opinion, found a more ready audience than any other, and that is, that there has been found in the North, among individuals and among the legislators of the North...

SUCCESSOR OF JOHN C. CALHOUN.

The death of Mr. Calhoun will have many and mighty effects on the present checkered condition of the public councils at Washington, and on the future movements of sections and factions throughout the Union. He was the great man of the South, and commander of the confidence of that region...

DANIEL WEBSTER'S SPEECH.

As for many years the intemperate habits of this Lucifer fallen have been degrading both his intellect and his heart, it certainly need surprise no one to hear from his lips correspondent statements and sentiments. Who may reasonably expect pure waters from a polluted cistern? His late speech, clearly and strongly indicated the lost man.

Behold the tears he sheds because the Methodists do not comply with his wishes and his hopes. He belongs to that elevated sect so highly prized by Mr. Calhoun as ever true to slavery...

MR. WEBSTER'S SPEECH ON SLAVERY.

On questions of national expediency or constitutional law, we should not venture to enter into any discussion with Mr. Webster. We go to him as pupils to a master to learn the political bearing and relations of political measures. But as responsible conductors of a religious press connected with a most intelligent and influential body of Christians, we must be wholly unfit for our place, unless we are competent to speak of the moral character and influence of great public measures.

MR. WEBSTER'S SPEECH.

The other main points of Mr. Webster's speech—the Proviso, the restoration of fugitive slaves, and the effects of abolitionism—we are frank to say, we heartily dislike, and as heartily reprobate. They are not only not Northern, but they are not American; they are sectional Southern, and antagonistic alike to the best moral sentiments of the nation...

The Congressionalist, a very able and conservative paper, says of Mr. Mann's speech:—

There is in it nothing of that time-serving policy, that blinking of great moral questions to subscribe a present end, that too obvious trucking to Southern prejudices and Southern interests, which strike us so painfully in the recent speech of another and still more distinguished son of Massachusetts.

The Puritan Recorder, a paper seldom carried away by any violent philanthropic impulses, cannot sanction Mr. Webster's remarks on the delivery of fugitive slaves. The Christian Mirror, equally remarkable for its candor and its calmness in such matters, in commenting on Mr. Webster's speech, says:—

Mr. Webster has spoken; but the Telegraphic report of his speech almost compels the wish, that he had held his peace. That report makes him to have said something which can never prove acceptable to northern men. It looks like yielding what they have no moral right to surrender.

Even the New York Observer, though sustaining Mr. Webster's views, because required by the Constitution, is obliged to admit the strong feeling that exists here on the subject, and says:—

We believe it would be difficult to find a respectable man at the North whose feelings would not revolt at the thought of aiding in the capture of a fugitive slave. Northern men who warmly love their Christian brethren at the South, and hold them in the highest respect, feel as strongly on this matter, we believe, as any men in our community.

We might multiply our quotations to almost any extent. Every one of these papers in its political views and sympathies, belongs to the conservatives, and lends all its influence except in extreme cases to sustain, support, and carry out the laws of the land.

MASSACHUSETTS TO THE SOUTH.

By JOHN G. WHITTIER. We hunt your bondmen, flying from Slavery's hateful hell...

The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Wood.

Henry Bibb, a fugitive slave, was then called to the stand. He expressed himself as follows:—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—I would much rather hear than be heard on such an occasion as this, but as I am unexpectedly called upon to make a few remarks...

We are not here on the present occasion one against another, but we come in all our strength to denounce that common foe, American Slavery.

Let us look a moment at the politicians—such a man as Daniel Webster, for instance, who stands head and shoulders above any other man in New England...

Rev. Samuel R. Ward, of Syracuse, N. Y., then proceeded to address the audience on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery, as follows:—

MR. CHAIRMAN, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.—Mr. Bibb has referred to the startling fact, that there is a proposition to turn all the United States officers into judges...

We have not got an impartial tribunal before whom this matter may come to be judged; for I will tell you that the judgment of American citizens is wrong in regard to the black men in this country.

Mr. Chairman, these are stirring times in which these questions have come before us. The minds of the people have been wrought up to a high pitch...

My opinion, Mr. Chairman, is, that there is no slavery in the United States that can endure the test of the Constitution—that there is not a slave in the United States who is held by the Constitution.

Now, sir, I take the Constitution as it reads, and as an instrument which must submit itself to the interpretation of the rules of law; and I take it not as one who has been educated for the legal profession...
